Grade 9 · English — Advanced Sentence Formation – Compound and Complex Practice

Focus: Advanced Sentence Formation · Compound & Complex Sentences

Reading Passage:

Aisha opened the document for her English assignment and frowned at the first paragraph. Every sentence was short and simple: Social media is popular. Teens use it every day. It can help. It can hurt. The ideas were correct, but the writing felt more like a list than a thoughtful argument. In yesterday's lesson, her teacher had challenged the class to use more compound and complex sentences to show Grade 9-level thinking. Remembering this, Aisha revised one part to say, Because teens are constantly online, social media can shape their friendships, confidence, and mental health at the same time. She also changed two short sentences into, Social media can create pressure to be perfect, but it also gives teens spaces where they can feel understood. When she read the new version aloud, the paragraph sounded smoother and more connected, and Aisha finally felt that the writing matched the strength of her ideas.

1. In one sentence, explain why Aisha's first draft sounded like a list instead of a strong Grade 9 paragraph.

---

2. From the passage, copy one compound sentence. Then underline or name the coordinating conjunction that joins the two ideas.

---

---

---

3. From the passage, copy one complex sentence. Circle or name the subordinating conjunction that begins the dependent clause.

---

---

---

4. Combine these two simple sentences into one compound sentence: Aisha used very short sentences in her first draft. Her paragraph did not sound smooth or mature. Use a coordinating conjunction (for, and, nor, but, or, yet, so).

---

---

---

5. Turn these two simple sentences into one complex sentence using the word because: Teens are constantly online. Social media can affect how they feel about themselves.

---

---

---

6. Rewrite these two sentences as one complex sentence using the word although: Social media can be fun. It can also be stressful for teens.

---

---

---

7. Decide whether each sentence is SIMPLE, COMPOUND, or COMPLEX. Write the type next to each one.

- a) Aisha edited her paragraph after reading the teacher's feedback.
- b) She checked each sentence carefully, and she read the paragraph aloud.
- c) Because she combined related ideas, her writing sounded smoother.

---

---

---

8. Rewrite this choppy mini-paragraph as 1–2 advanced sentences using at least one compound or complex sentence:

Teens read many messages online. They do not always know which ones are true. This can be confusing.

---

---

---

---

9. Combine these ideas into one complex sentence using the word when: I check my phone. I am walking to school.

---

---

---

10. Write your own complex sentence about school, sports, or friends. Use one subordinating conjunction from this list: although, because, when, if, while.

Tutoring Tip:

Model how to think aloud when combining sentences, and create a class chart of coordinating and subordinating conjunctions that students can refer to while they work.
